“ Annie you fought a good long fight! No more pain, sleepless nights, late or early hospital and doctor visits! Even when you were in pain you would still get up and move around like nothing was wrong. A lot of people would say you were a firecracker and say you would set it off at any giving moment, lol yes that was true but when i met you i picked up on your energy. You just wanted to talk to someone that would listen and wouldn't judge you for your past because you changed your life around and did what people said you couldn't do! I don't regret meeting you or how i met you because at that time and moment we needed each other. Rest in peace Annie McDowell! I will keep your family uplifted in prayer especially your boys!

We grow up together in a neighborhood that we all was family and took care of each other. Your energy and laughter will be missed my friend. I loved whom you was and after you changed your life you always had your testimony to share with someone else. Even though God had changed your life and had you working for him you continue to have that bomb in you that would explode anytime. You was true to yourself and people who had known you. Rest in peace my sister you earned your wings. 🙏
