“ BJ and I were born in the same little African American neighborhood in Belmont North Carolina. When my grandmother had to take over raising my brother and I, BJ who was a little older than us as well as all the other children of the neighborhood became like brothers and sisters to us. It was one big happy family in the neighborhood. Everyone taking care of everyone. Our friendship kept on all the way through our adult life and I will miss him and his teasing me every time he seen me. Praying my brother in Christ will have a joyful and peaceful rest in God's heavenly home.
